BECKER & POLIAKOFF ATTORNEYS PROVIDE LEADERSHIP ON ISSUES IMPACTING COMMUNITIES

The past year has presented challenges to the financial stability of communities across the country. Becker & Poliakoff attorneys work to protect the interests of communities and advocate for them in the Capitol, in the media, and even with the President of the United States.

"The failure of defaulting banks and homeowners to pay their share of the common expenses necessary for the upkeep of the common-ownership residential communities is forcing 'innocent owners' to directly bear the burden of the bad debt of others." – Becker & Poliakoff founding shareholder Gary A. Poliakoff, in his letter to President Barack Obama requesting a federal solution to the foreclosure crisis (March 10, 2009).

"The money that the associations spend taking care of the property goes to protect and preserve the value and condition of the bank's collateral. Why shouldn't the banks have some responsibility for those expenses?" -- Becker & Poliakoff attorney Kenneth S. Direktor, quoted in editorial, Palm Beach Post (March 8, 2009).

"The association has no incentive to foreclose...because the bank's lien has priority and [the association] will end up with nothing." – Becker &

Poliakoff attorney J. Kevin Miller, quoted in Lee County Condos Linger in Limbo, Ft. Myers News-Press (April 12, 2009).

"Community leaders cannot abrogate their responsibilities solely by hiring management to contract with a bookkeeping service. While the volunteer leaders are not expected to become experts, they must have a basic understanding of the association's finances." – Becker & Poliakoff attorney Lisa A. Magill, quoted in Associations Wary after Two Arrested for Condo Thefts, South Florida Sun-Sentinel (August 6, 2009).

"Obviously, it is not wise to fail to timely adopt a budget...[I]f the failure to timely adopt a new budget results in a shortfall of funds that is detrimental to the association, the directors could be exposed to some criticism and there may even be some potential liability for the association." – Becker & Poliakoff attorney Joseph E. Adams, author of It's Important to Handle Condo Budget Decision Well, Ft. Myers News-Press (October 25, 2009).
